Jutsu Do Iaido

The term Iaidō (居合道) refers to a specific style of kenjutsu that is concerned with the smooth, controlled movements of drawing the sword from its scabbard, striking or cutting an opponent, removing blood from the blade, and then replacing the sword in the scabbard. The linear motion and force applied to draw the sword from the scabbard results in slashes that are faster and stronger ...

Jutsu 道 means art or technique. The styles usually using jutsu as their suffix are more concerned with combat effectiveness as their goal. The difference between dō and jutsu can be seen as semantics. People sometimes argue over something like Judo or Iaido having decent martial applications.

Iaijutsu or Iaidō • Shinkan Ryū Kenpō

IAIDO - the way of the sword, is a martial art form that began as an off-shoot of kenjutsu. It was developed as a defensive method to counter surprise attacks and enemy raids in fifteenth and sixteenth century Japan. The purpose of Iaido was to slay an opponent with one stroke of the sword immediately after unsheathing it.

Iaido

But a general answer would be the difference is the meaning of 'do' versus 'jutsu'. Iaido would be a "way"; practicing for self-betterment being the more primary intent. Iaijutsu would be "martially effective"; practicing for literal effectiveness with live weapons being the more primary intent.

What's the difference between Iaijutsu and Iaido?

Iaijutsu refers to an older form of Iaido that focuses more on the military or fighting aspect of swordplay. Like Iaido, Iaijutsu is taught primarily through the practice of forms, but in general the movements are closer to the historical movements of older sword styles, and not as close to the modern Iaido standard motions.

Considering the background, I'd expect Toyama Battodo to be more like a practical "-jutsu", but they call themselves "batto-do". Certain Iaido ryu are quick, aggressive and rather raw, even though they are called "iai-do". Also, not to mention Iaido itself is still rooted in practical art and retains many aspects as such.

Difference between Iaido, Iaijutsu, and Battōjutsu? : Iaido

The term emerged from the general trend to replace the suffix -jutsu (道) ("the art of") with -dō (道) in Japanese martial arts in order to emphasize the philosophical or spiritual aspects of the practice. Purpose. Iaido encompasses hundreds of styles of swordsmanship, all of which subscribe to non-combative aims and purposes.
